DynaView Safeguards Panama Ports

Bay Shore, NY – IPVideo Corporation's DynaView system has been selected to safeguard one of the world's largest sea ports. Panama Ports Company (PPC) operates two ports in Panama and is a member of the Hutchison Port Holdings, which operates two-hundred and fifty-five berths in forty-four ports around the world.

These port and terminal operations serve the Panama Canal, the primary link for the transportation of goods between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. "The selection of the DynaView system was certainly a critical decision, due to the strategic nature of the port operations", said Juan Delgado, Vice President of Multitek Pacifico the system integrator.

DynaView is megapixel certified, which assures PPC that the system is capable of reliably capturing, recording and managing large resolution images. "The combination of megapixel cameras and DynaView provide significant advantages over other surveillance systems on the market," states David Antar, President of IPVideo Corporation.

After a detailed analysis of the ports surveillance requirements, selecting the DynaView project designed by Multitek Pacifico was an easy decision for PPC. It was obvious that DynaView would meet or exceed the ports high performance requirements, integrated intelligence, video recording and management, reliable design and high resolution imagery and therefore was the best and most cost effective solution to protect their employees, port operations, and cargo.

"We were used to the grainy, blurry images of CCTV," said Michael Hernandez, CIO of PPC. "When we first saw [the camera] images, they were so clear it was like watching a DVD. That sort of quality has become necessary in our industry."

The DynaView system helps lower the risk of theft, vandalism, and injury. The ability to recognize and use incoming video and audio signals as triggers to control system function, send e-mail alerts with images attached, provide routing of video display to specific security consoles certainly assists with the security process.
